the gold market showed considerable steadiness this morning, under a partial subsidence of the excitement of the last few days and a moderate demand from the "shorts," but during the afternoon it gradually gave way, and finally became "panicky." Favorable rumors from Sherman were abroad, and the report from London of the possibility of shipments of specie to this side, owing to the dataess of exchange, was magnified into importance. The peace commission offside was soon afterwards revived, as also the report of the ended prepayment of interest on the May mean. But the shipments of specie to this coun-from Europe, if they do take place, will necesimprobable that the government is fully propared to pay the whole amount of the interest at the present time.

The reduction of the Bank of England rate of discfrom five to four and a half per cint, which took place on March 2, indicates increasing confidence in financial and commer tal circles, and corresponding ease in monetary channels.

At a meeting of the Clearing House Association, held yesterday, to consider the report of the committee ap-pointed to take into consideration the application of three of the national banks for a finission to membership, two of the number-the Fourth National and the Centra National were admitted. This is a step towards the harmonious working of the two systems, and establishes a precedent in favor of admitting the other nations itutions in the city to the association. Meanwhile they will have to continue the present plan of exchanging through banks belonging to the Clearing House. The transactions of some of the national institutions are larger than those of the banks they clear through, and, by a rule of the association, the bank doing business in this manner for another is responsible for one day's clearings.

THE AMERICAN QUESTION.

Effect of the News of the Pall of Charles ton-What the English Journals Say of Sherman-Advance in United States Stocks and Pall in the Rebel Leam, Sec.
The news per Australasian of the fall of Charleston caused much sensation in England. Its immediate effect was the advance of two per cent in United States bonds and a decline of four per cent in the rebel loan.

The London Times says the influence of the success at Charleston can hardly be exapperated. The moral effects cannot but be most powerful on the conduct of the war. It is seen that the population of the Southeastern States is not able to oppose the march of the Union armies. The advance from Savannah to Charleston seems to have been as easy as the march from Atlanta to Savannah.

The London Star regards the fall of Charleston as premonitory of the utter overthrow of the rebellion. The London Army and Navy Gazette says the evacus n of Charleston and Cobantos and the concentration custed as a strategic nocessity, and says General sher-man's movements have been characterized by fire ight and accurate calculations, which have obtained results which place him in the foremost rank of the generals of the

Henry S. Foote's Manifesto.
THE REBEL CONGRESSMAN'S EXPLANATION OF HIS FLIGHT PROM RICHMOND AND AMERICA.

Henry S. Foote, late rebel Congressman from Tennes-see, has found the "sequestered spot" where he hoped to be free from persecution and taxation. It is at the "Golden Cross Hotel, the Strand, London;" and from here he dates a manifesto to his constituents in his usual grandifoquent style. His purpose in addressing them he declares to be in order that he may represent the reasons which influenced him to leave the rebel States, and in doing this he intimates that "the actual condition try" (and not Mr. Lincoln) forced him to seek refuge in a foreign land before he could communicate said reasons and divers other matters, which he assures his "well beloved constituents" "are vitally associated with their honor and happiness."

He begins by endeavoring to show that he was a Union man. His facts are not strong, his arguments are weak and his success rather lame. His assertions are worthy of notice, however, from the fact that he couples them with the statement that his opposition to the dis-union schemes which had culminated in the Montgomery deguated with the "gross and undeniable mismanage-ment" of Davis, and "the servility of his incompetent and snobbish Congress;" and so, with "the advice of all his discerning friends," he came to the sage conclusion that the "South would be inevitably ruined" if an honorable peace was not speedily effected. Knowing Davis was sel-shly bent on a further presecution of the war for his vile purposes, Foote says that, "after consulting with the left and wines whom I (he) met," he resolved to lose no time in introducing resolutions into the reled House known, much to Foote's mortification, which is expressed in the manifesto in a review of Davis' administration. sent his wife through to Nashville, got captured, was re himself as a peace commissioner in a long letter to Mr. Saward, chiefly remarkable for the assertion that he represented in that canacity "a large number of the most weighty and influential statesmen that the South contained, and at the wish of a very large majority of the people of the Southern States," whom he assures Mr. Seward 'are ready and anxious to enter once more North." He has a plan for the settlement of what he considers the chief difficulty in the way of bringing the war to a close—namely, slavery. He begs the North to deal with the South on that point "liberally and kindly,"

and says:—

Consider, if you please, that the fale of slowery has been realed by the operation of the wor itself; that flary land is now a free State, and Missouri likewise; that Kent eky, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Arkansas are sure in a few years, by their one websatry action, to adopt a system of emancipation; and that in all probability before the close of the present continuous classery will make exist upon the continuo. Can you not allord, then, to leave it where the festeral constitution left. If, though, circumstances exist which render such a plan of settlement impossible, then I am propar d to say, m tehalf of those whom I represent, that we will agree to such a change of the federal constitution as will secure the entire extinction of slavery on the Istday of January, 1800, and which will provide also for the freedom of all persons of African blood who shall be born after the 1st day of January, 1800.

In reply to this letter and his application to be allowed.

In reply to this letter and his application to be allowed to come to Washington, Seward sent orders to General Sheridan to send Foote to New York. On arriving in New York permission was granted him to leave the country, and he did so in February, 1865, after adit with one to Mr. Lincoln. Taking his one from the fact that he writes from on board the steamer in mid-ocean, he compares Mr. Lincoln to Neptune, begs him to "look the god, assume the Lideat of pacification and compose the discordant elements of this vexed land." recommending as the most potent spells to allay the fury of the contending passions of the two sections the adop-tion of measures for gradual emancipation in lieu of immediate abolition, and the remorseless enforcement of the Monroe Foote doctrine, and not forgetting that his "sequestered upot" is comfortably, not to say luxuri-qually, located in the bosom of the British nation. Foote proceeds in a foot note to show that England could very consistently join in the enforcement of the Monroe doc-trine, as improved by Foote, and present the sublime speciacle of the Anglo-Saxon race driving the rest of The "method of Mr. Foote's madness" is probably entained in the concluding paragraph of his manifesto, which has all the virtuous conciseness and wisdom generaily attributed to postseripts. He says:—

On arriving in the city of London I sat down to draw up this address to my valued neighbors and friends of Tennessee. It is not now my fortunate lot to see you face to face; I may possibly never again have that satisfaction; but I content you, my countrymen and fellow citizens, whatever may be the action of President Eincoln and the politicians now in power in Washington city, upon the propositions submitted to them in this correspondence, that you will younselves lee no time in refurning to the besom of the federal Union. It is far better, in my deliberate opinion, that you should do so, and do so at once, than to take the chances of future military success under Jefferson Davis and his present official associates, and rely upon them for the future restoration of your liberties, after they shall have been once completely surrendered to the moof uspecing and degrading despotism that has existed in the world since the days of Dionysius of syracuse. rally attributed to postseripts.
